Now, on Monday afternoon, Daley and a woman giving the name of Lillian Reed, alias Nunn, were arrested, partially disrobed, in a third-story room at a Sixth street house. They were charged with loitering and disorderly conduct.

Daley declared that he had been trapped by the police and insisted that it was the first time he had fallen from grace since he joined a Church about nine months ago.

Chief Carney of Louisville denied the charge that there was a "frame-up," and asserted that Daley was accidentally discovered while a St. Louis crook was being sought.

Little-Price Linen

Scarls, center pieces and luncheon cloths of very fine linen with drawn work in exquisite patterns. These pieces ormed window and store decoration during the holidays and their condition is a powerful though mute argument against our suet-laden atmosphere. But prices have been shorn so close you won't mind the linens' rumpled state, since it brings you the rare good fortune of such bargains. Prices vary so widely, as we have only one or two pieces of a kind, we won't attempt details here. Come and make your own investigation. Every woman loves these lacey beauty-pieces but rarely does the chance come to pick from such a handsome lot as this for such little prices.

Town building is much like College football, where a dozen of the students do all the playing while the others sit in the grand stand and look on, says CARL Crow in The Saturday

Building.

Unfortunately the town

the wheel of progress" is the model town that ias not yet been built.

In the modern game of town building factories and railroads are the big prizes, and they can only be secured by the proper kind of team work. Until factories come the town is merely a place where the wealth created by the surrounding farmers is exchanged. Locate the Courthouse there and the trade area widens to include a few more farms, and a few officials move in.

This is the analytical card-index system of town building, developed by the new profession of commercial Secretaries. Through it the prospective investor, seeking a location for a cotton compress in a Southern town, is able to learn the one railroad station where he could best locate and compete with existing cotton compresses. Through it flour mills, electric light and gas plants, steam laundries and brick plants are located with a certainty of return on the investment never known under the old alipshod system, which was no system at all.

This plan of securing factories is more common in the West than in the East. Property owners who have seen the population of their towns jump from nothing to several thousand know the profits that accrue during such a process through the increased value of real estate. They recall the recent wonderful examples of Chicago and Kansas City, and all things seem possible to them. They speak of live towns and dead towns, and when one wants to pay a municipality the supreme compliment he says it is "the livest town on the map."

The term dead, however, is a mistaken provincialism. No town is ever really dead until it ceases to be a town and becomes a spot where a town once stood.

Start a factory and the town is on its way to the goal expressed by riotous population figures. It is no longer living on the weath its soil alone can produce. Its manufactured articles are going out to other towns, bringing willing tribute from its rivals and from those outside the competitive zone. Smith Center buys its brooms. Metropolitan Podunk, with streetcars and four railroads, smokes its cigars! Shipments of flour from the local mill sometimes find the ultimate consumer as far away from home as Cuba!

Factories build cities. They are so important that certain groups of gentlemen might, within a year, give Chicago a population above that of New York by the simple expedient of moving a sufficient number of factories to the former city.

A few centuries ago the system was different. The most populous towns were those that could offer the best police protection to their inhabitants. Thrifty citizens did not care to live in a town with insecure walls through which ambitious invaders from other towns might penetrate to the embarrassment of the family treasure. They sought a place guarded by husky brawlers, protected by staunch walls and ruled by a warrior of established repute. Having chosen his place of residence, the good citizen provided himself with a stone club, ready alike for the defense of his own or the pillage of another town. This was the first manifestation of city spirit.

By and by poor old erring mankind decided that the looting of cities was not good form and invented the intricate game of business as a more interesting way of transferring the ownership of family treasure. Even under that code the game remained comparatively simple until the building of railways began.

Before that time a sizable town might be built at any point where a boat could unload, and at no other place. With the building of railroads a new element entered, as uncertain and interesting as a loose joker in a poker game. With proper railway connections it was found a town might prosper at any point, and therefore the previous ideas of commercial geography were abandoned.

Maysville Business Men's Club proposition from a party to locate a $40,000 a Lvie Wire and Will Make Old Maysville Hum

ment in a very large majority of cases, and Concern to Be Incorporated at Once will be outlined. -Much Work Being Planned

> THE PUBLIC LEDGER wishes to congratulate the people of Maysville that at last they are today to be the guest of Mrs. Joseph F. Perrie. to have a demonstration of what a united effort among her business men can accomplish when inspired by unselfish and personal

The time never was more opportune and the outlook never so assuring for the building of a "New Maysville" than in this inspiring year

At last night's meeting of the Maysville Business Men's Club the attendance was large, representative and wide awake, both to what we need and the great ends we are about to Mayor Lee presided over the meeting. Vice Vegetable Compound President Browning, absent.

The reading of the minutes by Secretary Key, and the approval of same, was followed by the reading by Attorney Stanley F. Reed of the Committee on By-laws of the new articles of incorporation and the new system of rules and regulations of the organization. On motion of Mr. Gordon Sulser, the By-laws were read section by section and voted upon as read and adopted as read with only a few minor ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION.

The articles of incorporation state: 'That we, S. P. Browning, J. W. Lee and J. N. Kehoe, do associate to form a corporation out it in the house. under the laws of Kentucky.

Article I. The corporation hereby proposed to be organized shall be named and known as ville, Ky., etc.

Article III. Article VII. The highest amount of in debtedness or liability to be incurred shall be imited to $25,000.

Article VIII. The private property of the members shall not be subject to the debts of he Company.

These articles are to be filed at once at

THE BY-LAWS.

The By-laws are of the same style and class governing all similar concerns.

Any person of "good character" may enter by paying $5. The dues are $10 a year, the first $5 being counted as part payment.

Regular meetings on the second Tuesday of each month and special meetings may be called by the President, or upon written request of five members. Fifteen members shall constitute a quorum, etc., etc.

The Secretary read a very satisfactory letter from C. and O. officials concerning this Club and Maysville's industries. The letter stated that Garrett B. Wall and M. H. Crawey would be pleased to visit the Club and do all in their power to beom Maysville.

The matter of naming a Committee of three to prepare four pages of advertising matter for the C. and O.'s Industrial Booklet, exploiting Maysville, was put up to the President saving means anything to you, we should have your trade and taken under advisement by him and the Committee will be named this week.

Dog Funeral

Rabbit, the pretty little black and white pet dog of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Cummings of Market street, is dead. Rabbit's death was caused by a poisonous button picked up an Second street while in company with its Master returning from the Pastime Theater Monday evening. No one would have wanconly poisoned the pretty thing.

It was simply an unfortunate accident. Every effort was made to save Rabbit, but it was not to be, and the pet of the household died while being ministered to by the sorrowing Master and Mistress. The body was emhalmed and laid out in a handsome little coffin, a blue ribbon was tied around its neck and a banch of flowers adorned the foot of the diminutive casket. It was, without doubt, the prettiest dog corpse ever looked upon, and hundreds visited the undertaking parlor of Mr. Cummings yesterday afternoon to view the pretty picture. Rabbit will be buried today to the family lot in the Maysville Ceme-
